The Help: Skeeter (Emma Stone) is a southern society girl in Mississippi during the 1960's who returns from college determined to become a writer and decides to interview the black women who have spent their lives taking care of prominent southern families, starting with her best friend's housekeeper Aibileen (Viola Davis). This results in turning her friend's lives—and a Mississippi town—upside down as more women come forward to tell their stories, to the dismay of the townsfolk that are becoming unwittingly—and unwillingly—caught up in the changing times.
